TENTACLES OF JAPAN

The long shadowy tentacles of influence that reach out incredible distances from the little island empire of Japan are continually popping out at you in the most unexpected manner at the most unusual times and in the most surprising places. Last week it happened again. And in this particular instance of it, California has not a little at stake. That astonishing new venture of the air, the trans-Pacific airplane service between these golden shores and China, will be for awhile at least not quite complete, merely because the Nipponese have chosen to put their finger in the pie. As originally planned, the route was explored, bases on islands in the Pacific set up, and practicability of the flight demonstrated by several test flights. The new huge 48-passenger "China Clipper" plane is here. Everything, in other words, is all set. Yet the Oriental terminal of the service will not be Canton, but Macao, which is Portuguese territory some distance from Canton, which will have to be reached via launch up the river. Why? It is Japan's doing. Or at least it is if Chinese publications are to be believed, and there is little reason to doubt them. These publications say the Chinese government has been compelled by Japan to refuse to permit the Pan-American clipper to land in Chinese territory. How can Japan tell China what to do? Japan simply does, and China is afraid to object.

A BOMBSHELL EXPLODES

Something of a bombshell exploded in Sacramento last week and scattered the wreckage of a very muddled situation all over the place. It all revolves around the northern, or Marin approach to the Golden Gate bridge. Originally it was left to Earl Lee Kelley, state director of public works to see that an adequate approach was constructed. The road, some four miles in length, was to link the bridge to the great Redwood highway, and thereby serve not just regions in the immediate vicinity of the bridge, but also the entire state as well. Then last week Mr. Kelley reported that he and the highway commission had decided on the three-lane highway. That started the fireworks. One bay region newspaper began printing cartoons of the bridge with a bottleneck at one end, cars piled up there in a mass of wreckage. Everywhere the cry arose that this historic structure, which will truly be a magnificent thing, was being sabotaged. Then the highway commission called a meeting in Sacramento, to which came delegations from San Francisco and the Redwood empire north of the Gate. There things began to happen.

THREE LANES OR FOUR

A couple of span directors huddled charges at Mr. Kelley, claiming the least the state could do for a bridge that was costing others several millions, was to build an adequate four-lane approach. Sydney W. Taylor, Jr., the bridge traffic engineer, set forth arguments to prove that a three-lane road would endanger lives of motorists. Kelley, who still, incidentally, is fighting for a three-lane affair, countered with figures to show that three lanes would be adequate to carry the peak traffic that crosses the gate now on ferries. Bridge directors in turn pointed out that traffic would increase at least three-fold with a bridge there, and that three-lane roads are always dangerous, however slightly travelled. Then Kelley said that the state could not put up more than the $500,000 already allocated, while any sort of a road will cost about four times that amount. He said federal funds of $1,700,000 would be forthcoming only if California complied with two conditions, namely that the state, instead of the bridge directors, collect and administer the tolls, and that the bridge would be guaranteed to be free of toll after the bonds had been paid off. This put a new light on proceedings. Everyone began to wonder whether or not there would be any approach built at all.

Young Couple Married Friday at Church Rite

The Rev. J. H. Bennett read the sacred rites last Friday evening which united in marriage Miss Marjorie Louise Keesling and Harold Eugene Shelley.

The choir rail of the Congregational church where the ceremony was performed was banked with asparagus fern and baskets of large yellow chrysanthemums, and a long basket of the same flowers of the button variety adorned the piano.

Mrs. W. H. Crothers played soft organ music preceding the wedding party's entrance into the church, among which were "Evening Star," "Melody" by Gluck, "O Fair Dove," and "Idyllie" by Gurliit, and the wedding march from Lohengrin, as the bride came down the aisle on the arm of her step-father, William H. Bachman, who gave her away. Prior to the service Miss Lois Bachman and Miss Muriel Wilson sang as a duet "Into the Dawn With You," with Miss Dorothy Matteson playing the piano accompaniment.

The bride was attractively gowned in an ensemble of navy blue wool crepe, made with a finger-tip jacket, with hat and accessories in the same color. Her corsage bouquet was of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ruby V. Keesling, sister of the bride, who was her only attendant, wore a dress of navy blue silk crepe, trimmed in white, with which she used black accessories.

The groom's brother, Richard F. Shelley, served as best man, and the ushers were Ernest Keesling, brother of the bride, Dennis Bennett and Robert Burrow.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held in the Future Farmers Attend Livestock Convention, L. A.

C. E. York, director of agriculture at the high school, left this morning for Los Angeles with a group of his Future Farmers, where they will attend a two day session of the Great Western Livestock convention. Many of the Future Farmers and 4-H club members will exhibit.

Those accompanying Mr. York are Ray Mondo, Al Frank, Frank Lovoi, Norman Husted, Stanley Lewis and Clifford Meyers. They will return Sunday.

Boy Scout Dinner

Rinconada district Boy Scout meeting and annual dinner will be held at the Black Cat in Los Gatos Tuesday evening at 6:45. At the business session the election of new officers will be held.

Park Ranger Home

Albert Turner arrived recently from the Grand Canyon National park, where he is a ranger during the season. He and Mrs. Turner (Miriam Blaine) are now pleasantly located in a house above Los Gatos, which is nearer Saratoga where Mrs. Turner is teaching.

IT'S STILL A MUDDLE

At this writing a big question still surrounds the whole problem. It is scarcely conceivable that this mighty colossus of steel, the greatest single span in the world, will two years from now stand astride the Golden Gate without means of getting onto it from the north. The approach will be built. It has to be. But the sort of an approach it will be is another matter. Just why Mr. Kelley is holding out for a three-lane road is not quite clear. The difference in cost is trifling, compared to the total amount of money going into the entire project. It is probable that a great public clamor will arise to sweep aside all opposition in the fight to get four lanes. The technicalities involved before federal works money can be secured are of little consequence. There will certainly be little objection to having the state administer the tolls. As for the bridge becoming free after the bonds are paid off, that was generally conceded to have been the intention all along.

Former Residents Will Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. David Ross Oliver, former Campbell residents, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at a reception to their many friends, at Merced, Calif., on Nov. 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver came to California from Illinois in 1893, settling at Los Gatos, where they spent about a year, then moved to Campbell where they lived until 1913, when they went to Merced, where they have resided since.

Mr. Oliver has always engaged in farming. He was foreman for the late E. J. Crawford for a number of years before he left Campbell. Since going to Merced he has engaged in raising figs and is one of the prominent growers of that section.

With Mr. and Mrs. Oliver to help receive their friends will be their six children, all of whom reside around Merced except Mrs. M. T. (Lela) Peppard, who lives at Yuba City. Also present will be their nine grandchildren. The Olivers will be pleased to have their Campbell friends with them on this happy occasion.

Last Rites for Mrs. M. Trigwell Held Saturday

Funeral rites for Mrs. May Trigwell, whose death occurred in San Jose last Wednesday, were held Saturday morning at the parlors of Amos O. Williams company, with interment at Oak Hill Memorial park.

Mrs. Trigwell had been a resident of Campbell for several years, living on Rincon avenue. She was a native of Belfast, Ireland, and was in the prime of life, not quite forty-three years of age.

She is survived by her husband, William Trigwell, and daughter Eileen of Campbell, and a brother, William Hanna, living in Toronto, Canada.

Although not very widely known in our community, those who had had the pleasure of her acquaintance, found Mrs. Trigwell a very delightful personage and regret her untimely death and extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband and daughter.

CAMPBELL WOMEN ATTEND FERERAT'N MEETING, SAN JOSE

Campbell clubs were well represented at the Santa Clara County Federation of Women's Clubs meeting in San Jose Friday, when Mrs. W. D. James of Hanford, state federation president, was the honored guest speaker. Attending the sessions were Mrs. W. H. Stray and Mrs. C. H. Whitman, presidents, and Mesdames Floyd Bohnett, Freeman Howes, George Burrow, L. J. Carboni, Charlotte Sutter, George Page, E. O. LaMontagne, and H. C. Smith of the Pundita circle and Country Woman's club.

MRS. YALE MAXON TO ENTERTAIN PUNDITA CIRCLE WEDNESDAY

Next Wednesday, Nov. 20, Mrs. R. Yale Maxon will open her home on Winchester road for the meeting of Pundita circle, with Mrs. E. O. LaMontagne and Mrs. E. K. Clendenen conducting a program on the origin and history of Thanksgiving.

Last week the club met with Mrs. D. H. Cramer, when Mrs. Rose Hanger related many interesting incidents and descriptions of her recent trip to England.

Miss Betty York played a piano selection, "Shepherd Hay," an old English song.

Mrs. Hanger presided at the tea table where a regular English tea was served. Mrs. M. E. Mumma, program chairman, assisted during the tea hour.

MASONIC RITES SATURDAY FOR LOCAL BUILDER

Andrew W. Johnson, contractor and builder of Campbell, passed away suddenly Thursday evening following a heart attack.

He had been at work all day on the job of remodeling the Ainsley building and had gone home satisfied that work was progressing very well.

Funeral services were conducted by Charity Lodge, F. & A. M. of Campbell, of which Mr. Johnson was a highly respected and faithful member. The service was held from the San Jose Undertaking parlors and private cremation held at Oak Hill Memorial park.

The pall bearers were Lloyd Morgan, George S. Robson, Roy G. Archibald, Herold W. Morton, James G. Burns and Carl B. Field.

Mr. Johnson was an experienced miner and lumber man before coming to Campbell, where he has been a successful builder for the past 15 years.

He is survived by his wife, Morvie Johnson, and daughter, Leah M. Johnson.

Alonzo Baker to Address Country Women Monday

Alonzo E. Baker of Mountain View will address the Country Woman's club Monday, Nov. 18, having as his topic, "Whither Goes the World, Politically and Internationally." Mr. Baker is a deep student of national and international affairs, is a wide traveller, and an interesting speaker. His discussion of this vastly important theme should be most valuable. Gentlemen will be welcome at the program hour, 3 o'clock.

Mrs. M. A. Ross, chairman of the committee of the day, has secured Miss Katherine Wood, who will play several piano selections at the close of the program.

State Convention Reporter At Meet Of Local W.C.T.U.

At the regular meeting of the Campbell W. C. T. U. held last week, the president, Mrs. C. C. Byrnes, who attended the state convention in Santa Cruz Oct. 21-24, gave her report.

The sessions were held in the M. E. church, the pastor of which, Rev. John F. Wilson, was at one time pastor of the Campbell Methodist church.

The convention symbol was the redwood tree, the motto being, "And the tree grew, and was strong and the height thereof reached unto heaven and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth."

Instrumental and vocal music interspersed addresses at each session.

An impressive memorial service was led by the state president. As the names were read, white robed women came forward bearing baskets of white flowers which they placed on the rostrum. One hundred and sixteen of our workers have passed to a higher life during the past year. The service closed with a solo, "No Night There."

Miss Olive Tillson, who was at the world convention in Stockholm, Sweden, gave a report of that gathering, and visits to other lands.

A splendid address by our state president, Mrs. Louise J. Taft, upon "The Tree, Its Growth and Purpose," a Loyal Temperance legion demonstration, and music filled one afternoon.

A speaker on motion pictures said the weekly average attendance was 11,000,000, 6,000,000 of whom were under seven years of age.

At one evening session the Santa Cruz high school A Capella choir gave special music and Governor Merriam and Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, national president, gave addresses. Each evening program closed with "Taps."

Rev. Edwin Bowling was present and spoke of the need of all temperance organizations to decide upon some goal to be reached, and all

Farm Bureau State Meet at Santa Cruz Set For November 18 - 21

SERVICE, CIVIC CLUBS IN JOINT MEET TUESDAY

At a joint meeting of the chamber of commerce and Kiwanis club Tuesday noon the regular business of the civic body was held.

To fill the president's chair of the chamber of commerce, Archie Keesling was elected for the balance of the year. His first official act was the appointment of a street sign committee, G. E. Farley, I. H. Grim and H. M. Shadle.

Campbell Kiwanians will be hosts to Los Gatos and Mountain View clubs Tuesday evening, and a sound movie of the oil industry will be shown by the Standard Oil company.

Popular Young People Married At Carson City

Robert Feathers and Wilma Barlett Laine were married in Carson City, Nev., Tuesday. They motored over the hills via Placerville, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Jones, the groom's sister and brother-in-law. On their return they came by way of Donner Lake, travelling in a delightful snow storm for part of the way.

Both bride and groom are popular members of the younger group in Campbell, who have a host of friends who wish them much joy.

Mr. Feathers has been conducting the Billiken lunch room for some time during the absence of the Barletts, who have been tramping in the north.

Physical Ed. Ass'n. Annual Meet Here

Santa Clara County Physical Education association held its annual barbecue and business session at Campbell grammar school last week with John Pavisio, retiring president, as host.

Fifty of the "phy-eds" and friends enjoyed the evening feast and program which followed a Spanish motif. A Mexican dance was given by Marion Jacobson, an accordion solo by Anthony LoBono, and piano numbers by Edith Hughes.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected: president, Lawrence Hill, Willow Glen; vice president, Milford Olson, Jefferson union; secretary-treasurer, Madeline Helm, Willow Glen.

M. E. UNITED BROTHERHOOD SUPPER NOV. 18

The United Brotherhood of the Methodist church, composed of men from Calvary church, San Jose, Campbell, Santa Clara (Federated), and Willow Glen, will meet in the Campbell Methodist church on Monday evening, Nov. 18. Supper will be served by the Women's Service club at 6:30.

A brief program will be given by a group of young people of the church, and will precede the address.

The men of the community are cordially invited to the supper, and to hear the program and address.

MUSICIAN CALLED TO PASTORATE

We regret to announce that William O. Koenig, for the last few weeks officiating in the music at Campbell Pentecostal mission, is leaving for San Mateo where he will minister in the San Mateo Calvary temple. Mr. Koenig is giving a musicale there this Friday, beginning services officially next Sunday evening. Campbell's loss is San Mateo's gain.

Rev. George A. Wagner

work together toward that end. He also told some amusing experiences in temperance work.

A social tea followed the program.

California's annual outstanding agricultural meeting, the California Farm Bureau federation convention, to be held this year at Santa Cruz, Nov. 18-21, will break all previous attendance records, it was announced today by Alex. Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the organization.

More than 2,000 California farmers, including producers of perishable, semi-perishable, and non-perishable crops, as well as livestock men, will take part in the four-day session, in which the most important problems facing the state's agriculture will be discussed and recommendations suggested for improving further the economic condition of California's basic industry.

The program, released today by Johnson, is crowded with a variety of topics of unusual significance and interest to the farm producers of the state. One of the special features of the convention is the manner in which resolutions are prepared, discussed, and voted upon. Contrary to usual custom, resolutions adopted by the California Farm Bureau federation, are printed in advance of their adoption, and members of the federation are given the privilege of studying and discussing the questions involved, before they come up for vote on the last day of the meeting.

Gov. Frank F. Merriam will address the Santa Cruz convention, Johnson said, and is to be tendered a luncheon by the federation Nov. 20. Another distinguished visitor, to address the convention, is Donald Kirkpatrick, Chicago, general counsel, American Farm Bureau federation, who is to represent American agriculture before the United States supreme court, in the case involving the constitutionality of the agricultural adjustment act.

Departments meeting on the first day of the convention include those representing farm home, deciduous fruits, dairy, poultry, field crops, vegetable growers, citrus fruit, cotton growers, livestock, resolutions, tax committee, credentials and recreation.

"The annual convention of the California Farm Bureau federation," Johnson said today, "is open to the general public, and all farmers and their families are most cordially invited to attend the meeting and take part in the entire program. California business men and industrialists, to whom the economic improvements of agriculture has a far-reaching significance and value, also are invited to attend our four-day session."

Each year, for the past 17 years, it is pointed out, the California Farm Bureau federation has been charged with a greater and greater responsibility in the agricultural affairs of the state. Conservative in its leadership, and yet progressive in its actions and recommendations, the federation is credited with the initiation and development of state and national legislative, organizational and educational measures and programs, the execution of which has resulted in large economic benefits to all California farmers.

LOCAL COUPLE WED AT SANTA CRUZ

Abe P. Klassen and Viola Thompson Mitchell were married at Santa Cruz on Nov. 1. After a brief honeymoon trip to San Francisco they returned to Campbell and moved into the Barlett apartment on Fourth street.

Both young people have lived here for several years and have a host of well wishers in this community.

Home from Tour

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Smith, a sister, Miss Clara I. Smith, and Clinton Smith arrived home Thursday after an extensive auto trip as far east as Chicago, returning the southern route and traveling some 6,000 miles. They kept Ray and Howard Smith well informed of their movements by interesting letters telling of the points visited.

Greeks Recall George to the Throne

GEORGE of Greece is once more king. The plebiscite resulted in his recall by a huge majority, and before long the monarch will be back on the throne he abdicated 12 years ago. The vote in favor of the restoration was almost unanimous, even in Crete, the birthplace of the republican leader Venizelos, who is now in exile and under sentence of death.

King George II

As the results of the balloting came in, Premier George Kondylis appeared on the balcony of a government building and announced: "As of tomorrow, King George II will be king of the Hellenes. There will be no political parties. They have been broken up by the people themselves and a new epoch of reconstruction will start."

"It's more glorious than I'd imagined. The expression of popular will to favor restoration was foreseen, but results exceeded all expectations."

The cabinet met to swear a new oath of allegiance to the exiled monarch. All armed forces were called to take a similar oath.

A delegation sailed aboard a Greek warship to present the official request for King George to return. Officials said they expected King George, who was in London, to come back within two weeks.

China Adopts Managed Paper Currency

CHINA has suddenly abandoned the metallic silver currency standard, adopted a managed paper currency and otherwise reformed its monetary system. The four-point program was announced in Shanghai by Finance Minister H. H. Kung just after Vice President Garner and his party of congressmen had left the city for Manila.

The American party was entertained by high Chinese officials, including Kung. But, despite much oratory of the hands across the sea character, no hint was given of China's contemplated action. However, all English language newspapers in Shanghai carried long interviews with Senator William H. King of Utah and Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, both of whom practically told China that it "was not any of her business what America did about silver," and predicted the continuance of United States purchases until the price of silver has reached $1.29 an ounce.

The new Chinese program provides for: 1. Nationalization of silver. 2. Restriction of bank note issues to three government owned banks. 3. Stabilization of the Chinese dollar at the present level. 4. Legalization of bank notes for payment of all debts which provide for payment in silver.

Reds Are Not Blamed for Attack on Premier Wang

BELIEF of the Chinese police that the attempt to assassinate Premier Wang Ching-wei was part of a communist plot was denied by the foreign office at Nanking.

The theory was widely held, however, that the gunman, Sun Feng-min, who died of bullet wounds inflicted by the premier's bodyguard, acted because of his anti-Japanese feelings. The premier whose condition was announced as "satisfactory," was considered friendly toward Japan.

At Peking, the political council ordered its subordinate agencies in North China to put down any group which endangers friendly Sino-Japanese relations. The council is controlled by generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, military leader of the Nationalist government.

Germany Plans Extension Toward the East

GERMANY has no designs on western Europe, but she does intend to promote her expansion in the Baltic states, and hopes later to divide the Ukraine with Poland. That is the substance of assertions made by Pertinax and Genevieve Tabouis, two of the leading political writers of the Paris press. They say Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of finance, revealed these plans to Jean Tannery, president of the Bank of France, and Montagu Norman, president of the Bank of England, at a recent meeting of the Bank of International Settlement at Basel, Switzerland.

Schacht, the writers say, exhorted the two financiers to act with Germany "in the financial field" to end the Italo-Ethiopian conflict as soon as possible. He is reported to have warned them that sanctions against Italy would lead to "the economic dislocation of Europe, ruin the lira and ruin even the pound sterling."

Neutralization of Gibraltar May Be Demanded by Italy

WHEN the nations get together in London in December for the next naval conference it is not likely they will be able to agree on much in the way of limitation of naval armament. But there is a good prospect that Italy will there demand the neutralization of the straits of Gibraltar, which would be extremely distasteful and perhaps embarrassing to Great Britain. Diplomats are certain the British would refuse to make the concession. They say Mussolini's purpose is to force Britain to declare her intentions in the Mediterranean, where a large part of her war fleet is massed at the present time.

It was reported in Paris that the Duce would ask that the straits be put in the same status as the Suez canal, and would offer to scrap two 35,000 ton battleships now under construction as an evidence of his good faith. Britain hopes France will support her attitude concerning this demand and in return may agree to take a larger percentage of exports from French Morocco to strengthen France's position in that colony.

Sanctions Against Italy in Effect November 18

THE League of Nations set November 18 as the day on which the economic sanctions against Italy should be put into effect, and later decided that coal, iron and oil should be included in the embargo. The league appointed Premier Laval of France and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, to carry on peace negotiations with Italy. Sir Samuel still insisted any peace must be within the framework of the League.

The Italian armies on the northern front pushed further into Ethiopia, following the tanks and with bombing planes active overhead, and one column entered the city of Haufen on the way to Makale. The invaders met with no resistance of consequence. The government at Addis Ababa announced that Italian planes had killed 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows with bombs and machine gun fire at Gorahei. This place is the site of a military post in the south but all the men were at the front.

Emperor Haile Selassie Celebrates Anniversary

WHILE the invading Italians were pushing further and further into his realm, Emperor Haile Selassie I of Ethiopia celebrated the fifth anniversary of his coronation, and he did it in fine style, too. Escorted by a throng of feudal chiefs in barbaric attire, the king of kings and his queen passed through the streets of Addis Ababa amid wildly cheering thousands, and gave thanks to God in St. George's cathedral. Afterward, seated on his ivory and teakwood throne in the palace, he received the felicitations of the chieftains and the diplomatic corps.

The emperor holds that the big oil concession negotiated for American interests by F. M. Rickett, the English promoter, still holds good although the Americans relinquished it at the suggestion of Secretary Hull. "This concession," said Haile, "is an integral part of our national economic program. We purposely granted it to a neutral country like the United States in order to avoid political complications and international jealousies. It is unfortunate that war must delay its fulfillment. Through the benefits accruing to this concession we hope to raise the social level of people and provide them with honorable remunerative employment."

"I am sure that when our country is again at peace, and the circumstances are propitious, all the terms of the enterprise will be carried out by the original concessionaires, who never canceled the concession, but merely withdrew temporarily at the suggestion of the State department for the worthy motive of promoting international peace."

Milwaukee "Fiend" Killed by His Own Bomb

MILWAUKEE, which had been terrorized for eight days by a succession of mysterious dynamite explosions, was relieved when the terrorist, Hugh Frank Rutkowski, was blown up by his own bomb as he was preparing for another outrage. Unfortunately a little girl was killed by the same blast. The bomber, described by the chief of police as "an extreme low type of individual with a warped, criminal mind," had at least one accomplice who may also have been blown to pieces by the explosion.

Two-Year Program for Corn-Hog Production

AFTER a conference with agricultural specialists and representatives of farmers, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced that a two year program for corn and hog producers had been determined upon, the main features of which are:

1. Prevention of an excessive production of corn in 1936 and 1937.
2. Allowance of an increase in next year's pig crop that would be at least as great as it is estimated would take place were no adjustment program in effect.
3. Prevention of an excessive increase in the 1937 pig crop.

Maximum and minimum hog production requirements will be imposed under the new contract particularly to prevent regional dislocations in production next year, according to AAA officials who said such "dislocations" would be certain to develop because of maladjustments in feed supplies and hog numbers brought about by the 1934 drouth. The maximum and minimum requirements have not been determined.

The new contract will require that an area at least equal to the number of acres withdrawn from production of corn be added to the usual area of the farm devoted to soil-improving and erosion-preventing uses. This requirement was a part of the 1934 corn-hog contract, but was relaxed when the drouth came.

Corn Loan of 45 Cents Announced by Wallace

CONTINUING the administration's policy of "enabling farmers to market their crop in a more orderly fashion," Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced a corn loan of 45 cents a bushel on the 1935 crop, available from December 1 until next July 1. The Commodity Credit corporation had already approved this and asked a commitment from the R. F. C. to provide the necessary funds.

Wallace estimated that about $150,000,000 would be advanced to corn growers under this program.

Carnegie Medals Awarded for Heroic Actions

MEDALS were awarded by the Carnegie hero fund commission to 47 men and children of the United States and Canada, or to their relatives in 11 cases. Most of the awards are for rescues of persons from drowning.

Two silver medals were awarded and 45 bronze. The silver ones went to James C. Martin, fifty-one-year-old Joplin (Mo.) laborer and Christine Stewart, thirty-five, of Brookline, Mass. Martin went into a sewage pit trying to save a fellow worker. Both drowned. Miss Stewart leaped into the sea near Bar Harbor, Me., in an attempt to save Emily McDougall, thirty-one. Rescuers pulled them out 40 minutes later. Miss McDougall died. Cash awards totaling $7,000 for educational purposes accompanied the medals in 14 cases; the commission announced. In 22 other cases, a total of $17,250 was granted for purchase of homes or "other worthy purposes."

All the Northern States Feel Earthquake Shocks

EARTHQUAKE tremors that were felt in many localities all the way from Spokane and Calgary to New York and Boston were severest in Helena, where at least two persons were killed and many injured. Numerous buildings weakened by the former tremors in the Montana capital were thrown down and the property losses were considerable.

Tugwell's Budget Talk Displeases President

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, under secretary of agriculture and once considered head man of the "brain trust," made a speech at Los Angeles the other day that called forth a sharp rebuke from President Roosevelt.

R. G. Tugwell

Addressing a Democratic gathering, Tugwell asserted that the administration could satisfy every humanitarian demand and still balance the budget in 1938. Mr. Roosevelt, in a press conference, scolded the newspapers for printing what he called "crazy stories" and went on to declare that Tugwell's assertion was almost as unfounded as the predictions thrown out by many political observers that the budget probably would never be balanced again. Tugwell's statement wasn't quite as "wild" as the newspaper stories, he remarked, because Tugwell knew a little more about the budget than the newspaper men.

The President said he and his advisers were about to make a study of the financial situation, and that until the budget is finally drafted about the first of the year not even he knows what shape it will take. Every effort, he said, would be made to hold the regular government departments down to the figures of this fiscal year, but he would make no predictions as to emergency expenditures.

CALIFORNIA NEWS OF THE WEEK

Just one more hurdle, and that a minor one, is in the way of an "immediate" start on San Francisco's 1938 Exposition. With $3,495,419 in Federal grants in the bank to finance the project, there only remains the formal approval of the War Department to place 1200 men to work filling in the shoals site in San Francisco Bay. This approval is expected shortly.

William J. Shearer, California's 74-year-old absconding cashier, at last arrived in Sacramento, home of his confessed defalcations. He was extradited from Fort Worth, Texas, where the law finally caught up with him. His disappearance and the missing $24,000 has started a vigorous probe into finance tactics of all state departments.

The tide of jobless autoists entering California from other parts of the country is beginning to ebb. Checkup stations at border points show that for the month ending October 15, a total of 7,633 entered the state, as compared with the previous 30-day total of 10,863.

In order to check accounting methods of state departments with a view to stopping all polite, impolite, legal and illegal "rackets" in California's government, Governor Frank F. Merriam has appointed Accountant John F. Forbes "to study every state department, make what audits are necessary and then make recommendations as to proper administration of all departments."

Tying up a large cargo, between 50 and 60 members of the Sacramento warehousemen's union went on strike recently, following employers' refusal for an eight-hour week. Because several operators had tentatively agreed to the union's demands, workers in their warehouses were not called upon to strike.

From all over the country come contributions to the Will Rogers Memorial Fund. People in all walks of life are giving something so that a fitting memorial can be established for the world famous humorist-philosopher. The fund committee is still undecided how the money will be used.

Reverberations of the Gulf of Mexico maritime labor storm are being heard along California's waterfronts, adding to the unrest already existing in Pacific Coast ports. San Francisco labor leaders and employers are still at odds over the question of handling "hot cargo." A few freighters are being tied up at San Pedro over the same issue.

Shifting its activity from the battlefield to the highway the American Red Cross is undertaking an intensive drive against sudden death and permanent injury on the traffic lanes of America. The drive includes establishment of 1500 first-aid stations at strategic points along highways. Already there are 500 in operation. This news should be particularly interesting to California, which has more auto fatalities than any other state in the union.

William J. Cole Jr. will be one of the first to be tried under California's new "homicide with an automobile" law. Recently Cole's car struck and killed Joseph Teixeira in a Santa Clara traffic tragedy. The new law carries a penalty of from one to five years' imprisonment, instead of the one to ten year term involved in a manslaughter conviction.

With investigations becoming the popular pastime of state and Federal officials in California, San Francisco's police graft probe has definitely gotten under way. U. S. Bureau of Investigation is going in to the private affairs of every suspected policeman. A G-Man will head the probe.

To eliminate dangerous grade crossings and for highway projects in this state, WPA has announced that it will spend $889,000. Of this total, $247,000 will be spent on highway projects, $642,000 for grade crossing eliminations.

Fake Fingerprints May Divert Police Suspicion

Fingerprints of different people, as we know, are never the same. But it is possible for a crook to imitate a genuine fingerprint so that the suspicion of the police can be diverted, says Pearson's Weekly.

How this can be done has been shown by Dr. Harold Cummins of the Tulane University of Medicine, Chicago. Taking an original genuine fingerprint, he had it engraved, and made a three dimensional negative in wax. Then he took a cast in gelatin on a dummy finger. Twelve of the 32 prints he made, with the dummy finger were declared by fingerprint experts to be genuine.

Though this proportion is not very great, the United States authorities believe it is sufficient to allow criminals many opportunities to put the police on false trails.

MILNESIA WAFERS

SYNOPSIS

Perilla Fairfax and Corey Malden are to be married the next day at Lovell Terrace, Long Island home of John Lovell, her stepfather. Gathered are Tony Gaskell, best man, a lawyer; Hilda Sheldon, maid of honor; and Pete Wilson and Bob Coles, friends of Perilla's brother, ushers. Corey is very wealthy. He is thirty-eight and Perilla twenty-four, but it is a true love match. Everybody is busy, including Jane Latimer, Mrs. Lovell's pretty and efficient social secretary. There is a dress rehearsal and Malcolm and Bob are sent to get the Tenney girls. When the party is breaking up the night before the wedding, Malcolm complains of a headache. Tony produces some white tablets and nearly every one takes one, including Corey. After the wedding Perilla tells her mother that Bob had repeated his threat that if she ever married anyone except him, he would kill her, the bridegroom or himself. Her mother insists Bob was only teasing her.

CHAPTER II—Continued

Tony still made no difference in his attitude toward Bob Coles, but he kept his eye on the young man. What, he wondered, made the kid do that? Of course, he was in love with Perilla. But, for that matter, who wasn't. But one needn't behave like a boor. Chancing to catch Ellen's eye he walked leisurely toward her, and said in a low tone, "Best let it pass?"

"By all means," she replied. "Talk to me about it later."

"I ought to go home," Gaskell said, hesitatingly.

"Oh, no," she responded. "Stay overnight, anyway, for the dance at the club. Can't you remain a few days? We'd love to have you."

"Till tomorrow night, then," he agreed.

Meantime the big car bearing Mr. and Mrs. Corey Malden was speeding through the Hudson tunnel. Perilla discussed every detail of the wedding, pausing now and then to bestow rapturous caresses on the man of her heart, and to wonder if they would ever reach Philadelphia, as she was simply starving.

"And what about Bob Coles?" Corey asked. "Did you encourage him to give you that beastly kiss?"

"I did not! How dare you hint such a thing? But he's not to be mentioned in polite society any more. And if you ever let him come near me I'll get a divorce! Now, Corey, tell me all about it. Where are we going first?"

"To whatever hotel in Philadelphia you like best."

"Lordy, I don't care."

"That's what I thought. So I just engaged a suite at the one I like best. I have to see Garth tomorrow, you know. Then do you want to stay another day, or push on?"

"Oh, push on. I want to get to Washington, and then on to see your mother, and then—what?"

"Let's wait and see how we feel about it when the time comes. Let's just drift."

"That's what I think. You're a lovely thinker, dear. Oh, look, we must be coming into Philadelphia. Isn't it exciting!"

"Tomorrow we'll take a little drive along the Wissahickon, and still have time to see Garth, and push—"

"On to Richmond! But I'd love to take that river drive."

"Let's go to England, Perilla. Have you ever driven through Devonshire and Cornwall?"

"Do you mean go now?"

"Oh, no. After we get all settled in the apartment. Or whenever you like; but soon. And we'll do a bit of France, too."

"Life seems like fairyland," and she sighed happily.

"It's going to be, for us," he declared.

But he spoke without knowledge of the future.

Next morning Perilla said she would accompany her husband on his visit to the lawyer's house, where the important business was the signing and witnessing of Corey's will. The principal matter was that the great bulk of his immense fortune was left at his death to his wife, Perilla Fairfax Malden.

The will witnessed and stored away in Garth's safekeeping, he summoned his sister and a little celebration took place.

Lawyer Garth, quite familiar with the finances of the Malden family, was interested to see the girl who had won his client's heart.

"Baltimore next stop," said Corey, in answer to Garth's inquiry as to their itinerary. "Then Washington and Richmond."

As they drove back to the hotel they changed their minds about the river drive and decided to push on to Baltimore.

They reached there in time for a late dinner and found a sheaf of telegrams. Perilla seized on these gleefully, and took them with her to their rooms.

"You may have some of them," she said, picking out several addressed to Corey.

"We'll have dinner up here in our sitting room," she decreed. "Sarah, get me into a negligee and then you take yourself off to a movie. Tell Boynton he may go, too."

"Here, here," cut in Corey, laughing. "don't usurp all my rights and duties. Sarah, you send Boynton to me. I'll give him his orders."

"Oh, very well," Perilla returned. "You see, I thought you were too idle to do anything. Your telegrams any good?"

"No, are yours?"

"On the contrary. But here's the waiter for our order and here's Boynton."

It was not until they were eating their delightful and cozy dinner that Corey said, during an absence of the waiter, "What did you mean when you said your telegrams were contrary?"

"Leave that till after dinner, dear. I can't spoil my digestion for a silly old telegram."

Next morning proved to be beautiful, and the way to Washington was all too short. Perilla was dividing her attention among her husband, the scenery and the contents of her handbag, which she had just emptied into her lap.

"Good gracious, Corey, here's that telegram you wanted to see—I forgot all about it. 'Want it?'"

"If you want me to see it, yes, if not, no."

"Awfully involved sentence, but I get you. And once for all, you may always see my mail, telegrams or cables."

"All right, then Prillilgirl, if I may see them, - don't care to. See?"

"Well, look at this one. It's from that Coles reptile."

"Then I don't want to see it! Throw it away."

Corey tore the yellow paper into a dozen bits and flung them out on the road. "There," he said; "never use him as a topic of conversation. Better talk about this southern scenery you're passing through."

"It's lovely! Oh, I say, will your mother say I'm not a lady 'cause I wasn't born south of the Mason and Dixon line?"

"My mother? Do you mean our mother?"

"Yes, one of our mothers."

"That's more like it! Oh, Pril, you must like Richmond! Or, any rate, Malden House!"

"Of course I shall. Will mother come to see us in New York?"

"She will if she's well enough to be sure of that."

They found their hotel suite a veritable bower of flowers, and filled with parcels, books, letters, telegrams and cards of invitation.

"We'll have to stay here weeks, if we're going to accept all these!" Perilla exclaimed, tossing over the piles of engraved stationery.

"Up to you, Cap'n. Now, listen a minute; I've got a lot of business matters here that must be attended to. Let's have lunch, and then you and Sarah go off on a little shopping or sight-seeing trip, with Boynton, and I'll go to the office and get a stenographer, and put my work over in short order and join you in time for the Carmichael tea. We must go to that, you know."

After lunch Corey hurried away. Sarah made Perilla ready, and then went for her own wraps. Left alone for a moment Perilla stood looking about her and fairly gloating over the happiness that was hers, when a tap sounded at the door. Corey had told her never to open the door if she was alone, but she forgot that utterly, and flung the door open to see a charming looking young woman on the threshold.

"Mrs. Corey Malden?" the visitor asked, with a gay little smile.

"Yes," said Perilla, a little disturbed. "What can I do for you?"

"Ask me, first of all, to come in, and then I'll tell you who I am."

"I think you'd better tell me that first," and Perilla gave her a pleasant smile, but still stood in the doorway.

"But, of course. I'm Connie Linton, and I bring you a message from Mrs. Malden, your husband's mother."

"Oh, then, come right in—and do forgive my seeming inhospitality. My husband forbade me to open the door when I was alone, but I'm afraid I forgot. Now, I'm glad I did. Sit here, Mrs. Linton."

"Miss," the visitor corrected. "I live in Richmond, and the message I bring is Mrs. Malden's greetings, and she sends her love and hopes to see you soon."

"Then you've known my husband a long time?"

"Years. Corey and I are neighbors, although the houses are pretty far apart. Of course, he's a lot older than I am—"

"Indeed, yes," Perilla smiled, looking at the young face before her. But at this glance it seemed to her the youthfulness was accentuated by efforts other than nature's, and she considered her guest more closely.

For some reason she did not like her.

But Perilla was a most just little person, and she was all the more sweet and kindly, lest she be misjudging her guest.

"What did Corey give you for a wedding gift?" asked Miss Linton.

Now, the bride had her husband's present in a small chamois bag hung around her neck, but though she raised her hand to draw it forth, the familiar use of Corey's name struck her unpleasantly, and she moved her hand away.

"Oh, show it to me," Miss Linton urged. "I won't tell the reporters."

They laughed together, and in her ebullience of pride Perilla pulled at the ribbon and brought out the little bag.

"It's magnificent!" exclaimed the guest, "altogether too big and gorgeous for a kid like you."

"Corey says I'll grow up to it," and Perilla pouted a little.

"Of course you will, baby. Did you get any other pretties?"

"Lots of them. But I didn't bring them with me. I brought this to show to—Mrs. Malden."

"Can't quite manage the 'mother' yet, can you? Well, I want you to go for a little drive with me. I want to pick out a little gift for Corey's wife and I want you to help me select it. Are you all ready?"

"But you go with me; our car is waiting, and I'm just starting out."

Corey's wife was waiting for him in the car. She was a beautiful woman, and she was waiting for him in the car. She was a beautiful woman, and she was waiting for him in the car.

"Your Telegrams Any Good?"

anyway. Just wait till I call my maid." Perilla stepped into the little booth to telephone, and called Sarah, but had no reply.

"I can't get her," she said, turning back into the sitting room, "but that means she's on her way here from her room—"

She found herself talking to empty air. There was no Connie Linton in the room, no sign of anybody, and no sign of the too gorgeous diamond necklace.

Perilla picked up the house telephone and asked for the manager.

He was prompt to respond. To him she said, "Please come to me at once, yourself, and also the house detective. Say nothing, but hurry."

In less time than seemed possible, both men were at her door. She quickly told her story. The detective, whose name was Donovan, left the room hurriedly. The manager asked her several quick questions, then sent for her husband.

Corey Malden came quickly, took Perilla in his arms, saying, "It's all right, dear, don't worry," and then turned to the manager.

"Mr. Hardwicke," he said, "how could anyone gain access to this suite without being announced?"

"That is one of the greatest troubles we have to meet, sir. It can only be done by carefully connived trickery. The booty was of great value, I understand."

"Yes, but that is not so much to the point as that my wife was disturbed and troubled. So far, I cannot see that your people were to blame."

Hardwicke looked relieved, but still anxious. "Shall I leave you now, Mr. Malden? Will you see me later?"

"Yes, if you please," and Corey marvelled at the insight of the man.

"But, where's Sarah?" said Perilla, who looked troubled but not frightened now that Corey was with her again.

"Here I am," said Sarah herself, as she came to the door accompanied by one of the detective's men. "I'm all right now."

"You go with Mr. Hardwicke, Sarah," said Corey, "and tell him your story, and then come back here to us."

"Now, darling," he said, when they were left alone, "tell me every word, just exactly as it happened. Don't be afraid—spill it all."

"Well," Perilla began, "first of all, I disobeyed your orders—"

"That will do! Never use obey or orders to me, now that the marriage service is over. You mean, you forgot my request that you shouldn't open the outside door of the suite when you were alone."

"Yes; and that's just what I did do. And there stood an attractive lady who said she brought me a message from your mother."

"Clever work! And, of course, you couldn't resist that—nobody could. Well, go on, tell me every single bit."

So Perilla, now snug and safe in Corey's arms, told the tale exactly as she remembered it.

"Fine," he commented. "You did a fine job. Now, put the whole matter out of your mind. I'll have every effort made to find the thing, and if it's found, so much the better. If not, we'll pick out another like it, or different, as you prefer."

"And wasn't she your friend, Corey?"

"I don't think so. I had a friend named Connie Linton, but this wrongdoer merely borrowed her name for the occasion. But forget it now. I'll ring for Sarah, and then I must do a little more important dictation."

Sarah came; it seemed that some man in what looked like hotel livery had knocked at her door, saying he brought a message from Mrs. Malden for her not to go to her until after fifteen minutes had passed. He said Mrs. Malden had a caller.

Sarah thought nothing strange of this and wandered round the corridors.

"It's all right, Sarah, you were in no way to blame," Malden said, after some questioning. "Now, get Mrs. Malden ready to go to the tea, and I'll be back shortly."

The Carmichael tea, as the Maldens had supposed, turned out to be a cocktail party, and Perilla was fêted and flattered until a less steady head than hers would have been turned. Hurrying back to the hotel, they dressed, and started for the Carletons' dinner.

"You'll like the people, dear," Corey said. "Dick Carleton is salt of the earth."

"How you do love your friends, Corey. It's a nice trait. I think. Do they all love you as much?"

"Probably not. Carmichael is a good one, and Gaskell, as you know."

The Carleton dinner dance was of an elaborate type, and Perilla thoroughly enjoyed it. She loved dancing and she loved fine houses and elaborate appointments, and on this trip she was so flattered and beheaded that it rather went to her head.

Yet the depth and power of Corey's love was still more exhilarating and she longed for the time when they would have their own home and go and come as they chose.

"Do come and live in Washington," a rather uninteresting partner was saying to her as they danced.

"Now, how can you think I would do that?" she laughed. "Don't you know I am a New Yorker, born and bred? Do you think I'd change my home town?"

"Richmond isn't home. I understand you're going to live there, in the old Malden house."

"Oh, no, we're not going to do that," she cried, and then, fearing she was saying too much, added, "at least, not at present."

"Why don't you," he followed up, "unless, that is, you can't stand the old lady."

"If you refer to my husband's mother, please do not speak of her in that way. I have never met Mrs. Malden, but I already love her and deeply respect her."

"Oh, you do! Well, you'll get over that."

Perilla looked round the room, and saw Corey. "There is my husband. Will you be good enough to take me to him?"

"I will not," said the daring young man. "Come on, this is our dance."

"You are mistaken," said Perilla, gaily, for she saw her host approaching. "Oh, Mr. Carleton, won't you take me to Corey, please? I've had an awfully strenuous day, and we have a long ride for tomorrow."

Dick Carleton caught the serious note in her voice, and obeyed her at once.

"I'm very tired," she said, reaching Malden, "may I go home now?"

"Yes, dear," he said gently. "Let us slip away, Dick, my girl is really overdoing this society racket."

"Of course, then. I'll send my wife to you."

"Oh, don't trouble her," said Perilla. "she is busy with her guests. When we come back from Richmond I'll call, if I may."

And that's how it came about that Corey Malden and his wife went home early from the Carleton dinner dance.

Once in their car, she told Corey of the disrespectful way in which the horrid man had spoken to her of his mother.

To her surprise, he looked grave and said, "I want to tell you about her myself. I've been putting it off from sheer cowardice."

Perilla stared, but just then they reached the hotel. In their living room, he drew her down beside him on an old tete-a-tete love seat, and took her in his arms.

Blind Heroes Guided by Wives in Strange Town

A two-hour journey from Belgrade reveals one of the strangest villages in the world, where all the husbands are blind and the work of the colony is directed by the wives who see.

The town of Vetrenek is the first blind war veterans' colony in Yugoslavia, the first in a program of land settlements for the blind undertaken by the government.

The government institute for the blind arranged many marriages for unmarried blind veterans and aids the couples in the settlement at Vetrenek. The men are employed in useful crafts and the household work and operation of the colony are managed by the wives.

WE LAUGH AT THE EAST

California had the laugh on the east one day last week.

An earthquake, of all things, shook New York and the New England states, quite effectively jarring the very homes of our eastern cousins who have chided California because of her earthquakes, and have professed fear of coming out here because of them.

The quake itself did little if any damage to anything but the nervous systems of native easterners. Most of them had never felt one before, and didn't know what it was.

Upstate New Yorkers, seeing pictures sway on the walls and hearing dishes rattle, fled their homes in panic in the early hours. And police combed the country-side for information of a blast before learning what happened!

Laughable as all this is to the veteran Californian, there is in it nevertheless a reminder that might bear heeding. The day of earthquakes has not passed, just because this state has felt none recently.

Would you know what to do if a serious quake struck your community? Would you have presence of mind enough, for example, to be constantly on guard against fire?

KNOW YOUR POPULATION?

Do you know the population of your city?

Most of us have taken at their face value the yearly estimates of public officials and other population estimators during those periods between decades when the official federal census is recorded.

Yet it is a ten to one wager that these yearly estimates have not been correct—have, as a matter of fact, been too low!

The November issue of the California Tax Digest points out that the common practice of these estimators is to base their figures on local elementary school enrollment. School enrollment in many parts of California is decreasing because the birth rate is decreasing, but this does not necessarily mean that the population is also on the decline.

The Digest has worked out a correction factor from birth rate statistics which may be used to set right these population estimates based on school enrollment. It might be a good idea for the estimators to use this device.

A man likes to know with reasonable accuracy, the population of his city. Above all things, he does not want to go about believing it to be lower than it actually is.

"BETTER OFF DEAD"

"And Sudden Death—," the auto accident story that took the country by storm a month or so ago, now has a sequel. J. C. Furnas has written another.

Few who read Furnas' first plea for safety will ever forget the horror of it. He told such gruesome details as the "pointless flopping" of injured victims attempting to stand up and the nauseating appearance of a human head sliced off clean at the eyebrows.

The first plea was a national event. It was printed in thousands of newspapers throughout the nation, was distributed widely in pamphlet form, was passed out to violators by traffic officers, and was dramatized on the screen by "March of Time."

The new article that came out last week in a booklet published by Simon-Schuster likewise ought to be read by everyone who drives a car. It is of the same character, and entitled "Better Off Dead." The theme of it is that all accident victims don't die, but that lots of them wish they had.

"He was doubled up like a broken stick," Furnas describes a man with his back broken in an automobile accident. "They didn't dare try to unbend him till they reached the hospital. He was still alive and conscious. He proved that by stealing a policeman's gun out of its holster and trying to shoot himself while he still had the chance . . ."

"Thanks to the doctors that man is still alive. He has been operated on 25 times. He is always in acute pain and paralyzed from the waist down . . . All that ever happens is that the orderlies come and take him up to the operating room for another hopeless job."

These horror pictures of J. C. Furnas are pretty stiff medicine to read. But apparently what America needs is stiff medicine, which, although unpleasant, often saves people from even greater unpleasantness.

WHAT A RELIEF!

The day may not be far distant when California can forget the ugly word "relief" that came so prominently into our vocabularies with the depression and has since remained.

Improved business, seasonal agricultural employment and federal works projects absorbed 71,788 Californians from the direct relief rolls during September, Frank Y. McLaughlin, state relief administrator, announced last week.

This cuts the total relief cases to 626,717—237,084 below the peak load reached the first half of this year. And not a small proportion of that reduction is due to re-employment in private industry.

It is an encouraging sign.

But California still has a job on her hands. Six hundred thousand persons would fill a couple of cities the size of Oakland. They still must be put to work. And there is still more to do.

We must end even work relief. California's planning council ought to work up plans for settling many of our unemployed families permanently on the land. And private industry must absorb many more.

Then, perhaps, we may forget this word "relief" and leave the normal amount of it to be administered by charitable institutions, as it once was.

EDUCATION WEEK

If there is one thing that may someday cure all the world's ills, that thing is education.

Not merely formal education in schools, mind you. Self-education is often more effectual since it demands individual effort, something the spoon-fed variety often discourages.

California—the entire nation, in fact—throughout the week has been recognizing the vital role education plays in man's struggle for better things.

Education week is now drawing to a close.

Schools throughout the land have observed the occasion by inviting the public to visit them, to get acquainted with systems and methods in use today. California schools especially have been proud to do this, being among the comparatively few that held up their heads and kept pace with increasing enrollment through the depression.

But Education Week has been successful only if it has brought home to us that education is not necessarily formal, with grades and diplomas and teachers.

It is a much broader thing. A college graduate, as a matter of fact, has only scratched its surface. It goes on throughout life—and the finest educations may be attained by persons who have never seen the inside of a school.

Perhaps Education Week has stimulated some of us to go about educating ourselves with renewed vigor and zest. If so, it has been a crowning success.

Hear the new 1936 ATWATER KENT

Metal Tube Radio

MODEL 225. Here is one of the grandest little sets you ever saw or heard. A 5-tube A. C. Compact with the new metal tubes. Small in size yet big in performance, it gives you foreign and domestic programs with rich tone quality, and it looks smart wherever you put it.

MODEL 328. A 6-metal-tube A. C. receiver in a beautifully finished medium compact cabinet. 5 tuning ranges for foreign and domestic programs with airplane type dial and automatic light. Illuminating only the tuning band in use. An exciting set to own.

MODEL 328. (At right.) You can see for yourself the smart modernness of this 1936 6-metal-tube Console but we want to show you what a real metal tube chassis should look like. To bring you standard or foreign reception, police, amateur and airplane broadcasts at their best, Atwater Kent engineers have done more than merely adopt the new metal tubes; they have created new precision-built receivers to get the utmost out of these new tubes.

MODEL 317. (At left.) At the New York Radio Show and other shows throughout the country this Atwater Kent Console Model came in for a real share of enthusiastic approval. Not only the receiver itself with its 7 new metal tubes and famous Atwater Kent Control-Room Reception but the cabinet is one of the downright best looking that you ever laid your eyes on.

Ranked on a basis of bearing acreages, California boasts four major fruit crops with plantings of more than 100,000 acres each, according to a census of groves and vineyards just completed by the federal-state crop reporting service.

Grapes top the list in the count of acres, with a total of 499,186 acres devoted to vineyards, divided as follows: raisin varieties, 230,330 acres; wine grapes, 181,578 acres, and table varieties, 87,278 acres. The grape plantings have dropped off 136,278 acres during the past seven years, with the heaviest decline in raisin varieties.

Second in acreage, but first in income, orange groves total 211,346 acres, according to the federal-state report, with 114,722 acres devoted to Valencia and 96,624 acres in Navel and other varieties. The area in production has increased nearly 27,000 acres during the 17-year period studied.

The California prune is third in line, with 166,104 acres (approximately the same acreage reported in 1927), and peaches are fourth with 103,295 acres, about evenly divided between clingstones and freestones. Total peach plantings fell off about 20,000 acres in the seven years.

Indicative of the great diversification in the California fruit industry, the acreage census also recorded 15 other fruit crops, some with heavy acreages and others in the first stages of development.

In the citrus industry, the bearing acreage of grapefruit has doubled during seven years and now totals 12,648 acres, while lemons, with little change in acreage, account for 41,451 acres.

Leading deciduous fruits, other than peaches, include apples, 41,193 acres; apricots, 78,795 acres; cherries, 14,551 acres; pears, 68,969 acres, and plums, 31,358 acres. In the smaller acreage group, the federal-state report gave nectrines, 2,096 acres (first commercial plantings were made only six years ago); persimmons, 1,929 acres; quinces, 231 acres.

In the listing of "specialty fruits," avocados, a new industry, jumped from less than 700 acres in 1927 to 7,507 acres in bearing at the start of 1935, with 5,876 additional acres as yet non-producing. Other specialties included olives, 24,524 acres; figs, 41,526 acres; dates, 1,244 acres, and pomegranates, 754 acres.

Among nuts, walnuts have forged far to the front in the California industry, with 117,304 acres in production, a gain of 36,186 acres.

Almonds, making a small acreage increase, now total 71,804 acres, as compared to 66,104 in 1927.

Other nuts include 274 acres of chestnuts, 167 acres of pecans and 11 acres of filberts.

Meeting the twin problems of depression and an expanding industry, the California Fruit Growers exchange reports that exchange exports of oranges this season were 2.3-4 times greater than the past five-year average, with sales on the domestic market 15 per cent greater than in any preceding year.

An investment of $1,500,000 in advertising was a dominant factor in moving an all-time record crop, according to the citrus cooperative.

Geraldine Jurras has been temporarily appointed as club librarian for the Campbell Amateur Radio club, due to the fact that Bob Lowrie has left school.

At Tuesday's 40-minute assembly the high school band gave a concert of assorted pieces that were enjoyed by the student body. Wilbur Morton and Vincent Fisci played in several trumpet duets.

Our 10's and 20's met Mt. View here in two of the fastest and hardest battles so far this year. The 10's lost for the second time this season to the score of 9-13, and the 20's lost 13-21. Scoring on our side in the 10's was by Ogino, Uchiyama, Lobrovich, and Bohnett. In Mt. View's team Cordoza, Konoshima, Inki, Ishamaru and Hori scored. For the 20's Fisci, Rowe, Farley and Kurasaki scored, while Nakamoto, Barrile, and Picorelli dropped the ball through the hoop for the visitors.

Louis Shelley and Mr. and Mrs. William Bachman, both families residents of San Jose-Los Gatos road in Cambrian district.

David Knowles has taken Bob Lowrie's place in charge of keys and locks on the book lockers and is working hard to give prompt and efficient service.

Many of the students and teachers attended the auto show in San Francisco last week.

The advanced art class is busily engaged in the making of posters for the senior play which will be held on Dec. 13.

Campbell and Live Oak 10 and 20 basketball teams met in Live Oak last night in the final lightweight games of the '35 season. The games were fast and offered plenty of entertainment to the fans. We came out on the short end of the 17-20 score which featured the 10 game, but in the 20's we walked over Live Oak 29-19.

Barnes, Muki, Davis, Carlton and Puppo scored for Live Oak in the 10's, while Ogino and Lobrovich scored for Campbell. In the 20's, Gaultieri, Abat, Bass and Moniz scored for Live Oak, and Farley, Fisci and Kurasaki scored for Campbell.

Marvelous New Cars
News From Ethiopia

Silas H. Strawn, once head of the American Bar association and president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, says the country is spending $7,000 a minute, and thinks it is too much. Your small boy will tell you how much $7,000 a minute makes in one year. Once "all the world wondered," or at least we did, when there was talk of spending one-quarter of a billion on the Panama canal. Now, any professor could spend that, after three minutes' thinking, and news that the nation's deficit has increased fifteen hundred millions in the past few weeks startles nobody.

The world has passed through earthquake week. Earthquakes in Montana, greatest sufferer on this continent. Severe shocks are reported in Siam.

Earthquakes in Buffalo, N. Y.; Ottawa, Toronto, Guayaquil, Ecuador; a busy seismographic week.

And the moon is partly to blame. Its power of gravitation exercises a strong pull on the earth, as it shows in lifting the ocean tides. Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, of Harvard, says the moon causes "sub-surface adjustments of the earth."

The new cars of 1936, now on exhibition, are so extraordinarily beautiful that every American should see them, regardless of intention to buy a new car. Most encouraging is the determined energy that business men and engineers of the automobile industry have shown in fighting the depression, while improving that which seemed beyond improvement.

Rome gives confirmation of the slaughter of six thousand women and children by Ethiopian warriors taking vengeance on the fathers of the children who deserted to Italy. Rome also reports the killing of five hundred Ethiopians by Italian bombing planes, "an attempt to assassinate Haile Selassie by an unnamed American negro."

Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has "flung the last available man into the battle line," relying on old men, young boys and women to run his government, reminding you of the late czar's announcement that he was going to send "his last minister." He did not live to do that.

The national effort to "buy ourselves out of the hole" encounters difficulties. The President, to make his four billions cash spread as far as possible, announced top wages of $93 a month. But union labor says, "No; you must pay us full union wages," and New York may have a state-wide strike to back the demand. President Roosevelt, it is said, refuses to concede that public relief is a branch of union labor, and, even with 1936 looming ahead, may insist that two governments in the country are one too many.

Greece is ready to take back her king and many Greeks are growing "spike" mustaches like his. Many Germans grew mustaches, curling upward, to imitate their former Kaiser. There is not much in imitating mustaches.

You wonder why the Greeks can't find a Greek for king, if they must have a king. In days of "the glory that was Greece" it wasn't necessary to go outside among "barbarians" to find a ruler.

You may want to know that in England, where good times have really come back, the Tories have made heavy gains at the present election and the Labor party sustains heavy losses. Ramsay MacDonald, head of Britain's first Labor government, rejoices openly at Labor's downfall. His work as prime minister seems to have changed his opinions. Experience often changes our minds.

"It is a very great rebuff for labor," says MacDonald. "The people are not being taken in by wild and reckless promises which they know cannot be carried out, in municipal or national government."

Ed Howe, an able writer of Kansas, is expected to "put aside his pencil and pen forever," because his doctor warns him that blindness is approaching.

Perhaps Mr. Howe will tell his doctor: "Milton did much of his important writing after he was totally blind, and I can do the same." Mr. Howe can use a dictating machine, whereas Milton dictated to his daughters, who, uneducated, found it difficult to write down his Latin dictation.

Tales of

by Editha L. Watson

THE LOST CITY

IN 1879, near where the town of Aspen, Colo., now stands, a stranger staggered into a ranch house, ill, tired, and crazy from privation.

When he had recovered sufficiently to tell his story, he spoke about the ruins of an old city in Utah, near which were an old fort and a rich mine of gold and silver. The mine, he said, seemed to have been worked centuries before his discovery of the place. He had about 20 pounds of ore to back his story, which he had managed to keep throughout his journey over the broken country.

As soon as he had regained enough health to allow him to travel, the stranger set out again with his load of ore, saying that he intended taking it to Leadville to sell. He expected to devote the proceeds to furnish a modest outfit, when he would return to his find and work it. But he disappeared from all knowledge when he left the ranch, and was never seen again.

A party was gathered at Meeker to go into the Ute reservation where this mine was supposed to be, and it started out on the trail of the golden phantom. The party was headed by an old prospector who knew something of the country, and this man, as they neared the place where the mine was said to be, decided to go on ahead to scout the lay of the land. He was gone for some time, and when he returned he had with him two sacks of ore which were from 70 per cent to 80 per cent pure silver and also contained some gold. He came with bad news, however, for the Utes were not feeling hospitable.

Later on this same prospector met a cowboy who claimed to have considerable influence over the Utes. He was persuaded to join this man in a hunt for the lost city treasure, but first he made a map of the country and left it with friends, as he felt uncertain whether he would live to return.

Time went on, and no word came from the prospector or the cowboy. They seemed to have disappeared as completely as had the stranger who started for Leadville with his ore. At last the prospector's friends, who had been keeping his map, decided to go in search for him.

They followed the trail into a desolate country where no human seemed ever to have lived. At last they met an old Ute who appeared to be friendly, and told him that they were hunting for the two men. The Indian understood them, and led them on to the foot of a cliff. Here they found the body of the prospector, who had been shot and thrown off of the height, but no horse nor pack was to be seen. Several miles farther on the old Ute showed them the body of the cowboy, also shot to death.

The two men were buried where they fell. In 1904 the location of these graves was still known, but the site of the mine has never been found.

BEHIND THE WALL

IN 1906 two men named Murphy and Thomas came into a little town in Sonora, Mexico. They had some ore which they took to the local assayer, an American, for a report. It assayed $80,000 to the ton.

The newcomers said that they had been prospecting up in the mountains to the west, and one day their burros got away. It was while they were hunting the animals that they found a wall of masonry which aroused their curiosity. It seemed very old, and yet was well preserved. Its discoverers thought that there might be something valuable behind such a wall, and accordingly they broke through to investigate.

Crawling into the hole they had made, they found themselves in the mouth of a tunnel. There were peculiar jadeite statues and other evidence of ancient tribes in the long-hidden place, but what these men wanted was gold, and it was with a vast thrill of joy that they found it, at the end of some 150 feet, a two-foot vein of the yellow metal in the breast of the tunnel.

The assayer heard their story with great interest. Then he proposed that the partners let him in on the mine. It was Yaqui country, and three men would be stronger than two. Then, his greater knowledge of ores and minerals would also serve them well. He was able to convince Murphy and Thomas that they needed him as a third partner, and they agreed to take him back with them.

Two days later they started for the mine. On the way, the Yaquis ambushed the trio, and the two prospectors were killed. The assayer escaped, but he had not found out where to search for the ancient wall, and its location remains a secret to this day.

WILL DIVERT COLORADO RIVER

Pictured above are entrances to the two Parker Dam diversion tunnels. The tunnels, which measure 29 feet in diameter and are 1600 feet long, will divert the Colorado River while the Parker Dam is being constructed. This dam, 155 miles down stream from Boulder Dam, will form a 50-mile-long reservoir.

FIGHTS FOR HAPPY DAYS AGAIN

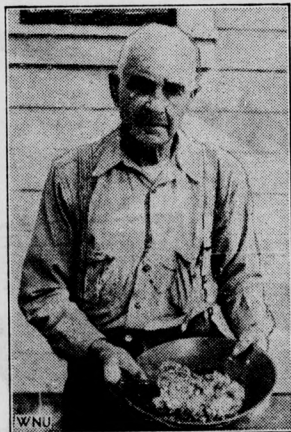

"My heart goes out to these young sufferers," declared President Roosevelt recently as he expressed his appreciation of the 200 nurses who contracted infantile paralysis while fighting the Los Angeles epidemic last year. The President's letter was sent to Dr. George Parrish, city health officer, and referred to 38 nurses who sent him birthday greetings this year. Of the 200 stricken, 100 are still convalescing. Photo shows Ruth Schaefer, one of the victims, who has been ill since July 4, 1934.

Confesses Hoax

Photo shows Clois Francis Key, known on the gridiron as Ted Key, and ball-packing star of the powerful U. C. L. A. eleven, who has admitted taking the name of Ted so he could use another boy's credits to gain entrance to the Bruin school. Following his confession, he was ousted from the university. Key made the winning touchdown against Stanford this year.

$5,000 Nugget

Here is Jefferson Casserly, prospector and writer, and an 11-pound gold nugget he found near Nevada City the other day. The nugget, larger than a pint milk bottle, is estimated to contain two pounds of quartz, nine pounds of pure gold, and to be worth about $5,000.

SKIMPING OF FEED IS FALSE ECONOMY

Moulting Hens Should Have Substantial Diet.

By Roy S. Dearstine, Extension Poultry Specialist, North Carolina State College—WNU Service.

A mistaken sense of economy frequently induced poultrymen to feed their hens sparingly during the moulting period. Attempts to save feed at this time will prove costly to the poultrymen in the long run.

When birds are fed scratch feed alone or only a limited amount of mash, the moulting period is prolonged and they are unable to put on the necessary weight to carry them through the next laying season.

The result is a drop in egg production that more than offsets the money saved by skimping on feed.

Moulting birds have passed through a heavy laying period which taxed their vitality and reduced their body weight. They are also losing feathers which must be replaced.

The birds need a balanced diet with plenty of protein to build up their muscular and glandular tissue and to grow new feathers. A balanced mash and a liberal ration of scratch feed should be before the birds at all times.

Since most poultry flocks are more or less infested with intestinal parasites it is advisable to deworm moulting birds not in lay. This will insure better health during the laying year.

Late moulters and birds laying through the moulting period are considered most profitable. An abundance of good feed will help keep the birds in lay and shorten the period required for moulting.

Enlarged Liver Caused by Not Feeding Properly

Enlarged liver among chickens usually indicates one of two things. Either they are eating too much or the feed is concentrated. In either case green feed and laxative should be resorted to when symptoms are clear; but above all, states an authority in the Montreal Herald, the ration should be changed and quantities fed should be stinted and strictly regulated. Production may keep up to a fairly high standard until the disease has become chronic and this is not easy to discern without a great deal of experience.

Hearty, growing birds can get this ailment as well as the other hens in the flock. Epsom salts in water, at the rate of one pound for 100 birds is the first thing to give to relieve the situation when a case of enlarged liver is discovered. A little castor oil mixed with wet mash is a desirable alternative. But the best remedy of all is the changing of the rations. Make it less concentrated by adding more roughage in the form of alfalfa or clover prepared in an attractive and palatable form, together with such vegetables as cabbage, carrots, turnips and others in season. It has been suggested that 12 pounds of mixed grain might be fed to 100 birds per day in addition to the mash that is kept before them at all times.

Treating Wattle Disease

Wattle infection, or edema of the wattle is caused by an organism that lives in the soil, according to H. M. Scott, Kansas State college poultryman. The infection causes the wattles to become filled with a fluid. In some instances, they reach huge proportions. Death may result. The most practical way of dealing with the problem is to cut off the wattles with scissors and apply a dusting powder to prevent bleeding. The powder should be made of equal parts of calomel and powdered burned alum.

Around the Poultry Yard

Provide water in abundance but not too cold or freezing.

Artificial lights provide the layers with 12 to 14 hours of feeding time.

Several hundred thousand chickens in flocks throughout Pennsylvania have been tattooed in a vigorous campaign to stop poultry thieving.

The 1935 hatchery code contains provisions covering chicken-sexing. Definite guarantees must be made to purchasers who buy their chicks by sex, and these guarantees must be fulfilled.

Breeding rations have been greatly improved within the last few years and one of the significant features of this improvement is the great increase in the amount of milk recommended.

Pekin ducks can be distinguished when they are seven to eight weeks old by their voice. The duck has a pronounced "quack," while the drake has a shrill voice of a much lower note.

Herman Not a Mama;

Wise Croaks in Order

It all was a mistake about Herman, and the boys at Texas Christian university at Fort Worth, who named their horned frog mascot "Hermania" after finding nine baby frogs in the pen have apologized. Freshman pranksters admitted putting the young frogs in the pen.

Herman's guardians have resolved only a veterinarian's certificate will persuade them to change his name again.

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

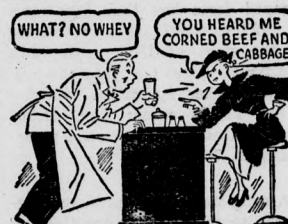

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—About this time every fall, the President calls the director of the budget to the White House and they go into a huddle about the finances of the government, about the needs for money of the various governmental agencies who must pay their employees and the other expenses to which they are put and in addition they discuss general questions of policy. It is, as I said, an annual affair that presages a new tempo in the movement of activities in Washington because it occurs some weeks in advance of the reconvening of congress. Congress, under the Constitution, must appropriate the money which is spent by all branches of government.

Well, the annual huddle has just been held by President Roosevelt and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the bureau of the budget, and Mr. Bell has gone back to his office in the treasury with instructions to begin formation of budget estimates for submission to congress.

Of course, budget making goes on throughout the year. The huge staff of experts and accountants who work under Mr. Bell's direction are busy the year 'round examining the proposed requirements of the various agencies and arriving at conclusions as to what their needs reasonably should be. The White House conference, therefore, represents the second step because those were the figures that formed the basis of the discussion between the President and his budget director.

In drafting the budget for submission to the next session of congress, the administration is confronted with a variety of problems.

not the least of which is the political phase. It is to be remembered that the budget now under consideration covers money that will be appropriated for use after July 1, 1936, and the succeeding 12 month period. Therefore, half of the Presidential campaign next year, indeed, the heated part of that campaign, will take place after governmental agencies have begun to use the new appropriations. It is easy to see, therefore, that politics can hardly be kept out of the forthcoming budget in some form or other, even though every President says politics does not influence budget making. Nevertheless, New Deal spending and future taxation constitute questions which the President cannot overlook and is not overlooking because those things are vital to every man, woman and child in the nation.

It seems to be pretty well settled now that the Republicans are going to make spending and taxation the major ammunition against Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal. In fact, it seems reasonably sure that the Republican slogan will be "Throw the Spendthrift Out." That being the case, Mr. Roosevelt obviously must have in the back of his head considerable concern over the current budget making.

Knowing "Danny" Bell as I have known him for nearly 20 years, during which time he has grown up in the treasury service, I think it ought to be said in his favor that politics is farthest from his thoughts.

I mentioned the issues of spending and taxation. The American Liberty League, which has consistently warned about the possibility of future heavy taxation has not been silent since the President some weeks ago made public a pre-budgetary summation. The league insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the spending which Mr. Roosevelt calls extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the league, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate relief if present unsound spending policies are abandoned." But it is emphasized by the league that even "if unsound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.

So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

My experience as an observer of politics and government prompts me to say that there is nothing that strikes the heart of the average taxpayer quite so fundamentally as displays of waste with the accompanying forecasts of greater taxation. Thus, if the New Deal opposition goes ahead on the course that appears to be charted for them—actually it is made to order for them—they can cause the administration many anxious moments. I say this, knowing full well that the administration has much argument on its side, and that it is equipped with the finest layout of machinery for influencing public opinion that any administration ever has had. It has at its command all the machinery used in crop production control, the thousands of persons on the federal pay roll and the millions who believe Mr. Roosevelt is earnestly seeking to make this a better country in which to live. It is, therefore, no small task for the New Deal opposition if it is to succeed even in turning the New Deal strength in the house of representatives to anything near an even distribution of seats.

Apparently, New Deal opposition will be concentrated as much in the congressional districts as against the President himself. The reasons are simple. First, the senate is going to remain Democratic whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected or defeated. Only one-third of the 96 senators come up for re-election next year, and the bulk of these are from normally Democratic states. Unless a cataclysm follows the Democratic party, the senate majority for the Democrats will continue to be ample.

Such is not the case in the house of representatives where the entire membership must seek election every two years. There are in the house membership possibly as many as 75 Democrats who can be called pure political accidents. That is, they were elected from districts which are normally Republican during the landslide that swept Mr. Roosevelt into office. A considerable number of these naturally will be retired by the voters just as a considerable number of Republicans were retired after they had held house seats in the early 1920's by virtue of election in the Harding landslide. Consequently, changes may be expected in the house New Deal strength. In concentrating the fight in congressional districts, the New Deal opposition is battling for position. If the New Deal majority in the house can be whittled down, it will then become impossible for the President to drive through his program of legislation as he has done in the last three sessions. From the Republican standpoint this would be important since it would place Mr. Roosevelt in much the same position that President Hoover found himself in the last half of his administration when he had an adverse congress on his hands. No political leader likes that situation.

When the New Deal opposition jumps onto the questions of spending and taxation, therefore, and when it goes back to the grass roots of congressional districts, it takes no stretch of the imagination to see that a real political fight lies ahead. Developments between now and the nominating conventions next June may change the general perspective.

While several of the federal courts, including the Supreme court of the United States, are considering questions revolving around President Roosevelt's program for development of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee river as an electrical power project, government owned, a newly discovered letter written by President George Washington takes on unusual interest. It seems that even in 1791, there was argument about the development of Muscle Shoals. The letter, which was addressed to the attorney general of the United States at that time, called attention to the efforts being made by individuals to effect trades with Indians and suggested the necessity for federal laws which would afford some protection for the Indians in their dealings with the white men. It will be remembered, of course, that the Tennessee river valley in those days was populated by Indians, but the problem that existed then exists today, namely, protection of the rights of the individual.

Easy to Make Pajamas Please Sleeping Beauty

PATTERN 2362

You're sure to want several pairs of these adorable pajamas when you find how easy they are to make. Why not have your week-night ones of some pretty cotton or flannel which launders easily? Then you just must have one pair in a luscious shade of blue or tearose silk, for gay week-ends away from home, and your "nightly" wardrobe isn't complete without one pair of dress-up pajamas of some heavier material for lounging or lazing, particularly if you're a Campus Queen. The tailored shirtwaist top may tuck into the bell-bottom trousers which "get the hang of it" from a triangular yoke and snug elastic waistband.

Pattern 2362 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions are included. Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 213 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Silk Topper Is Doomed; Few Are Learning Trade

The silk hat, unlike its felt competitors, does not lend itself to mass production, notes a writer in Tit-Bits Magazine. Every "topper" is the skillful creation of several experts working in conjunction, who have served a long apprenticeship to the job. They are body-bakers, trimmers, finishers, and shapers. The body consists of a stiffened calico wound around a cylindrical block, and upon this the brim and top are ironed. The plush cover, cut to graded sizes, is sewn together with a diagonal seam, and placed over the body while hot. As it cools it contracts to a perfect fit. The finisher gives the silk hat its beautiful sheen, and the shaper curls the brim and puts in the lining.

The very fact that the "topper" is the production of experts tends to make its doom even more certain than it would otherwise be, for no youth is likely to enter upon a long apprenticeship to a dying trade, and thus the time will soon come when no one capable of making a silk hat will be left. At the present there remain only a few hundred of such men.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

GUARD YOUR CHILD DURING THE DANGEROUS "INDOOR DAYS"

Winter keeps children cooped up indoors much of the time. What sunshine they get is weak in rays that produce vitamin D, the builder of bones. Is there any wonder that so many youngsters have poor teeth and rickety bones?

Bridge the gap of these sun-shy months with McKesson's HIGH POTENCY COD LIVER OIL. It furnishes 2½ times the usual potency of vitamins A and D. Vitamin A guards against infection. Vitamin D gives "sunshine" values.

Highest grade Norwegian oil. Extra refinement makes smaller doses effective. You can also obtain McKesson's COD LIVER OIL (Standardized). Either plain or Mint Flavored. Specify McKesson's when you buy. Sold at all good drug stores.

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced At Home

Sub Gently Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way

If you or any relative or friend is troubled by varicose veins, or hemorrhoids, the best advice for home treatment that anyone in this world can give, is to use a prescription known as Moore's Emerald Oil.

Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply airtight morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer troublesome. The penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed.

American Trust Notes Increase of Deposits Nov. 1st

Sharply accelerated growth in deposits is shown by American Trust company's statement of condition as of Nov. 1, 1935. Deposits for that date were $247,748,830.90, as compared with $226,776,812.71 on June 29, 1935, a gain of $20,972,018.92 in four months. Current deposits are $36,457,434.93 greater than those of Oct. 27, 1934, the corresponding date of a year ago.

The bank reports that temporary deposits of corporate trust funds account in part for this abnormal increase, but the normal deposits have shown substantial growth.

The American Trust company's statement shows cash on hand at $49,851,020.33, an increase of $11,590,239.30 over June 27, and of $4,380,468.41 over a year ago.

Bonds and securities of $109,273,732.90 represents a $3,145,589.79 increase over June, and a $28,462,808.86 over a year ago.

But, in the eyes of the American Trust company officials, the most gratifying disclosure of the current statement is the increase in loans, due to general business recovery which has led to an increase in demand for commercial credit and to renewed home building and other real estate activities.

Loans currently total $104,172,563.27, representing an increase of $8,570,278.06 in the last quarter, and an increase of $4,713,724.39 over the corresponding call in 1934. Current resources are $277,057,457.70, an increase of $23,604,833.39 in the last four months, and of $36,481,939.26 in the past year.

Willow Glen Theater

The world has waited two years to see Charles Dickens' imperishable romance on the screen. It comes to life now in a mighty motion picture—a masterpiece the like of which has never before been created to quicken the heart, to bring laughter and tears to millions. A cast of 65 great screen personalities portray its immortal characters—they live again in what is predicted to be the best-loved picture of 1935. "David Copperfield," coming Friday and Saturday, Nov. 15 and 16.

Not much need to remind you of the sensation-making press and patron plaudits for Bette Davis' brilliant work in "Bordertown" and "Of Human Bondage," and how close she came to winning the Academy acting award for it. Acclaim like that demands but one answer and this is it—Bette Davis in a starring picture of her own, "The Girl from Tenth Avenue." See this picture on your local screen Sunday and Monday, Nov. 17 and 18.

Janet Gaynor, scoring her greatest triumph, reaching new heights of emotion, humor, appeal, and Henry Fonda—a star overnight—flashing across the screen in a brilliant performance in "The Farmer Takes A Wife," may be seen at your neighborhood theater, the Willow Glen, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 19, 20 and 21.

457.70, an increase of $23,604,833.39 in the last four months, and of $36,481,939.26 in the past year.
